

Scholars from Siberian Federal University will do better research using Elsevier and Web of Science research platforms

Elsevier and Web of Science are expected to be the main information sources for SFU scholars, which will help them to improve their research, publish extensively and communicate their results to the international audience.

Now that Siberian Federal University has provided its researchers with access to this invaluable information, the university's publications will be based on better research. In addition, this improved access to scholarly publications will help spread the university's results for such research groups as those led by Professor Gitelson, Professor Vaganov, Professor Tsikh and others.
